is attracting unusual interest among boatingmen.

Organized in 1875 by the Passaic, Tritons, Mystic and Eureka Boat clubs, it at once took a commanding stand in boating circles and was looked up to as the leading association in its vicinity. Its superior advantages were at once recognized by surrounding clubs, and in deference to the many requests made on them, the association at length yielded, and in 1880 made it an open regatta to all clubs of good amateur standing, adopting Decoration Day as a permanent date for holding all future regattas.

From the very start it has been a success. Twice has the National Association of Amateur Coarsmen held its races there. Its superior course, fine boating accommodations and easy means of access have termed it the American Henley, by which it is becoming generally known.

ACTOR O'CONNOR MUST PAY.

JUSTICE CLANCY DECIDES AGAINST HIM THIS MORNING.

Revelations Made in Court-An Actor Who Played Half a Dozen Parts and Made the Costumes as Well-O'Conner's Acting as a Tragedian and as a Lawyer on -Mrs. O'Connor Testifies

That James Owen O'Connor has acknowldged himself a crushed tragedian and forsworn the footlights and the reception of cabbages and back-number eggs over them, was evidenced by his appearance in Justice Clancy's Second District Civil Court this morning to defend the action brought by his company for unpaid salaries.

He did not stalk in a lordly fashion, but came in quietly, with his wife on his arm, and sat down with her at the table reserved came in quietly, with his wife on his arm, and sat down with her at the table reserved for counsel, until the great mass of business on the calendar was disposed of. A stubbed growth of black beard had been blocked out on the tragedian's cheeks and upper lip.

He had from a bad actor become, if possible, a worse lawyer, as he proved very quickly when the case of Griffin against O'Connor was called.

Lewyer Sullivan amended his complaint, alleging a breach of contract, instead of claiming for work, labor and services rendered, whereupon Mr. O'Connor arose and said that, while he had the greatest respect for Justice Clancy and his court, he thought the case of sufficient importance ta be tried in a court of record, and he therefore moved that it be sent to the Court of Common Pleas.

As the lawyer-tragedian had not complied with the provisions of the code which requires a bond to be given for such transfer of a case. Justice Clancy promptly denied his motion and ordered the case to trial.

Walter Stevens, one of O'Connor's company, was the first to take the stand and swear that there is due him $37.50 for two weeks' salary and board. He had not performed any services during those two weeks, because the company did not play. He held Shylock to his bond, however, and produced a contract which promised it him.

O'Connor's cross-examination of the witness was rambling and pointless, consisting of speeches to the court and reporters.

He intimated that Stevens was not an actor, whereupon Counsellor Schlivan suggested that he might have become a good one under the tutilage of O'Connor.

Linden Clark claimed $33.50 his due, and told of his being paid by the tragedian two weeks' additional salary at the close of last season to show that such contracts were customary.

"Pardon me if I am a little rusty. I haven't practised in eight years." he re-marked to the Court as another of his sup-porting company came to the stand.

John K. Newman testified that he played three or four characters every night, and his employer's cross-questioning brought out the fact that he also made the company's continues.

Edwin Barry, the leading man, took the stand, and proved his claim of $37.50. He has been on the stage twenty-one years, and Mr. O'Connor said that he is the son of the late Edwin Forrest.

"I have nothing to say against this descendant of one of the world's greatest tragedians." said the ex-tragedian, grandiloquently. "I have found him to be the best Shakespearian reader in the country."

Clancy, a the vertical time of the best Shakespearian reader in the country."

"You have received a fine compliment, if not your money," smilingly remarked Judge Clancy, as the witness stepped down.

Richard Griffin, the plaintiff, to whom was assigned the several claims of the other actors, proved his claims and the assignment.

assigned the several claims of the other actors, proved his claims and the assignment.

Jessie Villars's claim was proven by Stevens and then the tragedian placed his wife, Louise, on the stand.

She claimed that she had been mobbed by the company at the Alman House, and was forced to pay them $300. According to her version of the case the actors owed her husband a week's salary each overpaid.

The defendant then made a speech in which he asked Judge Clancey to pay no attention to the remarks concerning His Honor assigned to him by the press. He had never made them. He had too great respect for the court to ridicule it.

"And as for my company," he continued, "they may impugn my ability as an actor, but not my honor as a manager."

The tragedian did not take the stand to deny any of the testimony for the plaintiff, but walked out proclaiming his confidence in the Court, which promptly entered up judgment against him for $220 damages and $17.50 costs.

O'Couper will have to enswer in an action. $17.50 costs.

O'Connor will have to enswer in an action brought by another member of his company, Emma Young Crosbie, before Justice Dean, on the 26th.

The two pieces of paper were identical in size. They had the same corner turned down, contained the same candidates names and were in the same handwriting.

A resolution commending the action of the tellers in throwing out the suspicious ballots was passed. Dr. Edwards tried to explain how the suspicious ballots might have been cast by accident, but the conference would not hear him. The majority seemed to think a fraud had been attempted.

The eighth ballot was taken a little before noon and resulted in no election. Dr. Newman gained 9 votes and Dr. Goodsell gained 4. Dr. Payne lost 39, while Dr. Cranston gained 29.

All the public schools in Brooklyn are closed to-day in honor of the celebration, and all the public buildings and many private ones are displaying their flags.

According to the programme, which was arranged some time ago, all the Sundayschools, with the exception of those in the Prospect Park division, were directed to assemble in the different churches to which they are assigned at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon, when the indoor exercises would be

KERR'S PART IN THE PLOT.

THE MINUTES OF THE BROADWAY ROAD USED AGAINST HIM.

His Counsel Protest in Vain Against the Introduction of Evidence to Show How the Boodle Was Raised - Ex-Mayor Edsor creased Interest Shown in the Trial.

Bear-baiting as exemplified in the torture of timid and servile Ludolph A. Fullgraff, having had its day in the trial of ex-Treasurer Thomas B. Kerr, of the Broadway railway, for bribery, variety was expected for the rest of the trial, and there was a more numer ous attendance of spectators in the Court of Oyer and Terminer this morning.

There was Lawson N. Fuller, whose Cable Railway Company, Fullgraff says, offered $750,000 for the franchise.

There were also Ira Shafer, of Cleary's counsel; Frank Dupignac, of James A. Rich-counsel; Frank Dupignac, of James A. Richmond's defenders, and ex-Judge William Fullerton, who helped to defend Jacob Sharp. Lawyer Clarence E. Aiken, of Auburn, likewise absorbed points of law. Peter A. Hendrick, one of the three young men to whom Judge Morgan J. O'Brien presented his $90,000 library and his practice when he was elevated to the Supreme Court Bench, was there, with his tall, broad shouldered brother, Father "Tom" Hendrick, of Union Springs.

Ex-Mayor Franklin Edson, whose opposition to the surrender of Broadway to the railway franchise grabbers was ineffectual, was a spectator, with a grim sort of satisfaction on his pleasant face as he witnessed the discomfiture of another of the men who triumphed over him in that long fight. But when the proceedings grew wearisome and the gray ex-Mayor arose to leave the court-room, the ruddy defendant also arose, and the two clasped hands in a friendly shake for an instant.

Assistant District-Attorney Semple began Instant.

Assistant District-Attorney Semple began the proceedings by calling in a loud voice for Thomas B. Brown. But Brown did not answer. Neither did Sharp's son-in-law, John H. And so the trial halted for held of the second series and series Bright.

And so the trial halted for half an hour, when Mr. Brown put in an appearance and was projected into the witness' chair.

Mr. Brown was a bookkeeper in 1885, and he testified that in June of that year his employers, Reed & Carmick, borrowed $8,000 from Fullgraff, receiving seven one-thousand-dollar bills and two five-hundred-dollar bills—presumably a part of the $10,000 which Fullgraff claims to have received from De Laury.

Fullgraff claims to have received from De Lacey.

Henry A. Robinson, who was Secretary of the Broadway Kailway, was called to identify the book of minutes, of the meetings of that corporation, beginning May 17, 1884.

Mr. Gockran and ex-Judge Davis objected. The former said vehemently:

"We submit that the people should put in the testimony which is to establish the connecting link between the bribery and the defendant. The trouble is that all this testimony is offered now with the supposition that the defendant will be connected with the facts proved at a later stage, when we know from the outline given in Mr. Fitzgerald's opening that this cannot be done. From the statements made by him in his opening we know that the prosecution are laboring under a misapprehension of facts."

Justice Patterson overruled the objection, and then Mr. Sempla read a history of the Broadway Surface Railway Company from the records of the meetings of the directors. On June 8, 1884, the records showed the Directors voted to issue $500,000 second mortgage bonds. Fitzgerald, D. D., of the Newark Conference—received congratulations from their friends this morning.

After the reading of the journal Bishop Bowman announced the result of the fifth ballot. The whole number of votes cast was 449, of which Dr. l. W. Joyce, pastor of St. Paul's Church, Cincinnati, received 326 votes. He was declared elected, as only 300 votes were necessary to a choice.

The sixth ballot was ordered and the vote was cast in less than half an hour. There was no election. There were 437 votes cast—292 were necessary to a choice. J. P. Newman received 252; G. A. Goodsell, 250; E. H. Payne, 145; Earl Cranston, 188.

When Dr. Newman's vote was announced it was greeted with an outburst of applause. Bishop Bowman rebuked both the delegates and the andience. He said that they were not at a political convention, and that even though they were in an Opera-House they were carrying on God's work.

On the seventh ballot there was no election. There were 441 votes cast, of which 294 were necessary to a choice. Drs. Newman and Goodsell each received 258, Dr. Cranston 156, and Dr. Payne 135.

The convention promises to be a thoroughly harmonious one. There will be no opposition to Congressman Scott, ex. Congressman Mutchler, ex. Attorney-General Cassidy and Chas. E. Boyle. The platform will be adopted late this afternoon, and the following plank is embodied in it:

"That revision of the tariff laws is necessary, with a view to their simplification, the correction of their incongruities and inequalities. The regulation of duties in such manner as will put industry on a firm and permanent basis, by covering the difference between wages in this country and in foreign countries. The abolition of taxes on raw materials for manufacturers, and the relief of the people from useless and onerous taxes, and from extortions by trusts and monopolies controlling the prices of the common necessaries of life. That to this end and that labor may be the more effectually protected in the enjoyment of its earnings, and in steadiness and continuity of employment; we give our most hearty and most emphatic indorsement to recommendations of President Cleveland's last annual message to Congress, and as in line with the principles laid down in that message; we commend to Congress the prompt adoption of the revenue bill reported from the Committee on Ways and Means, and urge the Democratic Representatives ir Congress from this State to give it their earnest and undivided support. The remainder of the platform treats of public lands for actual settlement by citizens of the United States, and will also set forth that the surplus in the Treasury should be applied to the public debt; that the Democratic party favor just and liberal pensions and so on.

Then Mr. Brown identified the records of the meetings of the Directors of the Broadway & Seven'h Avenue Company, and Mr. Semple read for another hour.
